

Buttons the Brave Bunny

Chapter 1: The Dark Burrow

Buttons was a small brown bunny with one floppy ear. Buttons lived in a cozy burrow at the edge of Sunny Meadow.

Every night, when the sun went down, Buttons felt scared. The burrow got dark, and dark places felt very big and very quiet.

"I don't like the dark," Buttons said to Mama Bunny. "It feels like it is hiding something."

Mama Bunny smiled and gave Buttons a warm hug. "The dark is not scary," she said. "It is just resting, like you do."

Chapter 2: Hazel the Owl

One evening, Buttons heard a soft hoot outside the burrow. It was Hazel, a wise old owl who lived in the big oak tree.

"Why are you shaking, little one?" asked Hazel, tilting her head.

"I am scared of the dark," said Buttons. "I cannot see anything, and my heart beats very fast."

Hazel chuckled softly. "I love the dark! It is when I fly the highest and see the most stars. Come, let me show you."

Chapter 3: A Sky Full of Stars

Hazel led Buttons to the top of Sunny Meadow hill. Buttons looked up, and up, and up.

The sky was full of hundreds of twinkling stars, and the moon glowed like a big silver coin.

"The dark lets the stars shine," said Hazel. "Without it, we would never see them at all."

Buttons smiled, feeling brave for the very first time. "Maybe the dark is not so scary after all."

Chapter 4: Home Again

Buttons hopped happily back to the burrow, no longer afraid of the shadows along the path.

"Goodnight, Hazel! Thank you for showing me the stars," Buttons called out.

"Goodnight, brave Buttons," hooted Hazel, flying off into the night sky.

From that night on, Buttons looked forward to the dark, because the dark meant it was time to see the stars.